t From the Cleveland Plaindealer.] It has been said by some of Mr. George W. Gardner's friends that the reason be was defeated in the Republican Convention for Mayor was because he was not in the city for several days previous to the primaries. THESE ADVANTAGES ARE OFFERED ONLY But it is known to only a few why he was not in the city or where he was. As will | be seen further on, but for a good Providence he would not be in the city, or even now than in the time of the "peculiar in- that the stable was on fire, and that it was in existence, to-day, season, Mr. Gardner left Cleveland on Monday, March 24, and on the same afternoon left Sandusky on the ill-fated little steamer Golden Eagle, to accompany Mr. and Mrs. Bixby, the newly-engaged steward and stewarders, to Ballast Island. Mr. Warren Corning, of Cleveland, was also on the boat, tiful trust in Providence and waits o'clock yesterday. which had a considerable number of other for the fig to drop into his mouth. passengers beside a crew numbering six The first thing that struck us was addles and four children. The other ladies were Mrs. Bixby, who was on Lake Erie for the first time in her life, and a Miss Smith, of Middle Bass Island.

The voyage from Sandusky to Kellev's Island was made without mishap, and the many thousand passengers between Put-ining still on board. But she had not gone far before she began to have trouble with the ice, which was drifting with the current of the lake and interfered with the backing of the boat to get beadway to bunt into the ice ahead. When about a mile from shore, Mr. Gardner discovered, by signs which an experienced steamboatman only would detect, that the boat was leaking. About the same time the cook reported to the Captain that water was coming into the kitchen. It was soon found that the boat would inevitably sink, and that all that could be done was to get the people and freight out on the ice as quietly and promptly as possible. So Mr. Gardner informed the ladies that they had better take their light baggage and get on the ice, as they would probably have to walk ashore. The captain then blew his whistle for aid from the island and caused lamps to be swung to indicate the whereabouts of the party. The twenty-live passengers were got out the floor torn up. The current seems to on a cake of ice about thirty feet square, and were then informed what the trouble was. The metal life-boat of the Golden Eagle was also landed on the ice, and the women and children were put into that. There were four peddlers among the pasengers, and one of them attempted to get the wall had the teeth melted off, and near- all present. Another of the peddlers tried a like trick when a change of boats was made later, and met with the same treatment at the hands of one of the Islanders. In the course of what must have seemed a very long time, a boat with runners, used in winter for transporting the mails to and from Kelley's Island, was pushed out to meet the wrecked party, who were pushing along very slowly and laboriously in a nestanding in the vard was killed and another cessarily zigzag, roundabout course over the badly hurt. Some clothing was ignited by ice, Mr. Gardner shead in the darkness, the flash, but was soon extinguished. The one time the boat was launched into an opening and shoved across, while the men around, and with much difficulty again pulled the boat up on the ice. Here it became necessary for the lady in the bow of the boat, Mrs. Smith, to get out, in order to have the craft pulled on the ice. Mr. Gardner offered to take the babe she held while she was helped out, but the mother would not let her darling go from her protection, and was assisted out, still chinging to her little one. But, as said above, the party of Islanders, with lanterns and the mail-boat, at length met the wrecked party, and lent their aid in helping the passengers to shore over the broken and drifting ice. It was exceedingly fortunate that no wind was blowing, or the ice would have been than doubled.

It was a toilsome and hazardous journey from first to last, accomplished in darkness except for the light of a few lanterns part of the time. But, to cut a long story short, it was safely ended, and all landed, without serious accident, on the east point of the island, where they at once appropriated a fish-shanty for the ladies. Afterward the inhabitants opened their houses and made all comfortable. The baggage was taken from the Golden Eagle by the crew and by Islanders dispatched to the scene, and was put upon the ice. One worker would take a piece of baggage to a spot where he thought it would stay until some one should take it further ahead, and would then return for something else. And so it came about that the very last article taken off the boat-a sewing machine belonging to Mrs. Bixby-was the only article of baggage or freight which reached the shore that night; for the ice years ago. - Norristown Herald.

During all the perils of the night, Mr.

Gardner says, the ladies were beroinescool, collected, and ready to do just what they were told. The same cannot be said of some of the men.

On Tuesday word was telegraphed to Sanpassengers to Ballast Island. The little Mystic was hurriedly got half ready and put out, taking Messrs. Gardner, Corning, and others to Ballast Island, then returning immediately to Sandusky. No boat appeared on Wednesday, and Mr. Gardner was naturally uneasy to get back to his political vineyard, so urgently in need of his husbandry. On Thursday, impatient to start dle Atlantic States, clear and partly cloudy home, Mr. Gardner started with Mr. Cornweather, northwesterly winds, falling fol- ing in a small boat for Put-in-Bay, in hope lowed by rising temperature and rising ba- to get passage from there to the main land.
